- Act V of 2013 on the Civil Code (Civil Code) • Act C of 2000 on Accounting (Accounting Act)

5. Cookie management

5.1 The system serving the website places a small data package, a so-called cookie, on the user's computer and reads it back during a subsequent visit in order to provide a personalised service. If the browser returns a previously saved cookie, the cookie management service provider has the possibility to link the user's current visit to previous visits, but only in respect of its own content.

5.2. Cookies:

- store technical data about the website visitor and their devices
- remember the individual preferences of website visitors
- facilitate the use of the website
- provide a quality user experience

5.3 The purpose of session cookies is to allow visitors to browse the website and use all its features fully and as smoothly as possible. A cookie stored in the browser will expire after a maximum of 2 hours by default, but depending on the active use of the website, the system serving the website may renew the expiry date of the cookie.

5.4 The website also uses Google Analytics as a third party cookie. Google Analytics collects information about how visitors use the websites by using its statistical service. The data is used to improve the website and the user experience. These cookies will also remain on the visitor's computer or other browsing device and browser until they expire or until they are deleted by the visitor.

6. Rights of data subjects and means of enforcement

6.1. The data subject may request information about the processing of his or her personal data, and may request the rectification, erasure or withdrawal of his or her personal data, except for mandatory data processing, and may exercise his or her right to data portability and objection in the manner indicated when the data were collected, or by contacting the Data Controller.

6.2 Right to information

Processing may take place only if the data subject gives his or her freely given, specific, informed and unambiguous consent, in a clear affirmative action, such as a written, including by electronic means, or oral statement, to the processing of personal data concerning the natural person. Consent covers all processing activities carried out for the same purpose or purposes. Where processing is carried out for more than one purpose, consent shall be given for all the purposes for which the processing is carried out. In order for consent to be considered informed, the data subject must at least be aware of the identity of the controller and the purposes for which the personal data are processed. The natural person must be informed of the risks, rules, safeguards and rights associated with the processing of personal data and how to exercise the rights that he or she has in relation to the processing. The Controller should not retain personal data solely for the purpose of responding to possible requests.

6.3. Right of access, rectification and deletion

Natural persons should be transparent about how their personal data relating to them are collected, used, accessed or otherwise processed, and in what context the personal data are or will be processed. All reasonable steps must be taken to correct or delete inaccurate personal data. Personal data must be processed in a manner that ensures an adequate level of security and confidentiality, inter alia, in order to prevent unauthorized access to or use of personal data and the means used to process personal data. The data subject should have the right of access to the data collected concerning him or her and the right to exercise that right easily and at reasonable intervals in order to ascertain and verify the lawfulness of the processing. In particular, the data subject shall have the right to have his or her personal data erased and no longer processed where the collection or other processing of the personal data is no longer necessary in relation to the original purposes of the processing, or where the data subjects have withdrawn their consent to the processing of the data, or where the processing of their personal data otherwise does not comply with the law. Where the data subject submits a request for access or rectification to the controller in writing, including by electronic means, the controller shall provide adequate and comprehensible information within a maximum of one month from the date of the request.

6.4. Right to data retention

The data subject has the right to receive the personal data concerning him or her that he or she has provided to the Data Controller in a structured, commonly used, machine-readable format and to transmit such data to another Data Controller.

6.5 Right to object, right of withdrawal

The data subject shall have the right to object at any time, on grounds relating to his or her particular situation, to processing of his or her personal data necessary for the performance of a task carried out in the public interest or in the exercise of official authority vested in the controller, or necessary for the purposes of the legitimate interests pursued by the controller or by a third party, including profiling based on those provisions. The data subject shall have the right to withdraw his or her consent at any time. In the event of objection or withdrawal, the Controller may no longer process the personal data, except on compelling legitimate grounds which override the interests, rights and freedoms of the data subject or for the establishment, exercise or defence of legal claims.

6.6. Enforcement options

The data subject may exercise his or her enforcement rights before the courts under the provisions of Act CXII of 2011 on the Right of Informational Self-Determination and Freedom of Information (Infotv.) and Act V of 2013 on the Civil Code (Civil Code Act), and may also seek the assistance of the National Authority for Data Protection and Freedom of Information in any matter concerning the processing of his or her personal data. In case of infringement, the data subject also has the right to judicial remedy. In order to exercise his or her right to judicial remedy in connection with processing operations, the Data Subject may bring an action against the Controller before a court if he or she considers that the Controller or a controller acting on his or her behalf or at his or her instructions is processing his or her personal data in breach of the provisions on the processing of personal data laid down by law or by a legally binding act of the European Union.
